

Open Call

Zeitschrift für Theologie und Philosophie (ZTP) is a double-blind peer-reviewed academic quarterly (online and print) committed to fostering research in and between the fields of systematic theology and philosophy.

Research papers, written in either German or English, discuss a topic in systematic theology and/or philosophy. Areas of interest include dogmatics, fundamental theology, philosophy of religion, metaphysics, (religious) epistemology, anthropology, (theological) ethics, philosophy of mind etc.

We are especially interested in work that addresses emerging questions at the intersection of theology and philosophy (and other sciences).

Contributions from disciplines related to systematic theology, such as biblical studies and church history, are also welcome, if they address a specific systematic question and the topic covered is of interest to systematic theologians or philosophers.

We invite unsolicited submissions for upcoming issues and particularly encourage early career scholars and researchers to contribute. Research papers can be submitted at any time via <https://ztp.jesuiten.org>.

ZTP is indexed in the Web of Science (Emerging Sources Citation Index) and is available in leading academic libraries across the globe.
